

Chemtrails FAQ

Question 1 What are Contrails?

Contrails form above a certain altitude near 30,000 feet when hot engine exhaust momentarily condenses ice crystals into thin vapor condensation trails that quickly vanish like the wake behind a boat.

Notes: Contrails fade away quickly; the reactions of dissipation begin immediately as the particles leave the aircraft engine; different factors such as humidity, temperature and pressure affect the speed of contrail dissipation.

Question 2 What are Chemtrails?

Chemtrails form within powder contrail generators and are dispersed from aeronautical vehicles which they create thin lines that persist and react with the atmosphere. The chemtrails form in a similar pattern as contrails - there is still a condensing of ice crystals into thin vapor condensation trails that quickly vanish like the wake behind a boat. If chemtrails contain Nano-based metal and polymer fibers, the condensed trails would not dissipate. Instead the thin lines of polymer nano metals react with light, wind, temperature, frequency and chemicals with the surrounding elements in the atmosphere.

Stratospheric Sulfur Aerosols Geoengineering

The ability of stratospheric sulfate aerosols to create a global dimming effect has made them a possible candidate for use in geoengineering projects.

Marine Cloud Brightening

Cloud reflectivity enhancement is also known as 'marine cloud brightening' or 'cloud whitening' on low clouds. An opposite scheme exists to reduce the reflectivity of higher, colder cirrus clouds. It is a geoengineering technique that works by solar radiation management.

Greenhouse Gas Remediation

Greenhouse gas remediation projects are a type of geoengineering and seek to remove greenhouse gasses from the atmosphere, and thus tackle the root cause of climate change.

Morgellons has been detected in human and animal tissue and in the atmosphere

Mystery Fungus?

From Cliff Carnicom:

"The recent discovery of anomalies in a series of observations of human blood samples, one of which is from an individual that manifests advanced symptoms of the MORGELLONS' condition.

This research remains at an early stage of investigation. The work will be presented without delay because of the implications should these discoveries prove to be accurate.

The finding here is that there is essentially identical form, size and structure between the airborne filament samples that have been reported on extensively over the years in connection with the aerosol operations, the morphology of at least one characteristic Morgellon's fiber and with a series of blood anomalies that have recently been documented. There are now major considerations before us because of this."

Additional Observed Sciences - THE HUMAN ANTENNA

"A point of minimum ohmic resistance was identified on the body using a digital ohmmeter. Such a location was found to exist at the base of the skull behind the ear lobes. Two electrodes were connected to these locations. No signal or current of any kind was introduced into the circuit; the human body in this case is acting only as a receptor and an antenna."
